Wilkes County is on or near the Virginia line so they might have come down from Wayne County. Do you think the Thomas Alford and Elizabeth Alford, who witnessed some of these deeds, could have been the parents of William Alford?

William Alford was born 1751, and died 8 November 1811.

Mary Warren Alford was born 1747, and died 2 August 1812.

Both William and Mary Alford, and apparently their son, Robert Alford who was born 4
April 1771, and died 1787; are buried in the old cemetery of Shiloh Evangelical Lutheran Church on Muddy Creek (now Lewisville, North Carolina). This may also have once been known as Sponhauers Community.

I am of the opinion that the Alfords were probably not members of Shiloh Lutheran as I do not find any records of membership (baptisms, etc – nor even their burials) in the old Shiloh Church Records. At that time there were no Episcopal churches in the area – only this Lutheran Church, some Moravian Churches and some Church of Christ. Apparently this church was near them as both the church and their property were on Muddy Creek. They probably attended this church and used it's pastor for burials and maybe marriages and were allowed to be buried in their grave yard. Their graves with stones are still readable on them today.

Lewisville, North Carolina is near Clemmons, (west of Winston-Salem) in Forsythe County. In the time of these Alfords they lived between the Moravian communities of Bethabara and Hope. Hope was the English speaking community and church for the Moravians who came down from Maryland. I still believe these Alford might have come to the area with a large influx of English and German people from Maryland to the Wachau Tract owned by the Moravians. Wiley's English Harper family were also amongst this group (Read Records of the Moravians – Fries).
